Anemia Management in CKD

Anemia develops in the course of CKD and is seen in almost all pts with kidney failure. Pts with GFR < 60 should be evaluated for anemia.

- Measures to evaluate anemia include hemoglobin (Hgb), hematocrit (Hct), and iron stores (ferritin, transferrin saturation). Hgb is preferred over Hct as Hct is a derived value affected by plasma water and is affected by shifts in plasma volume with diuretics and dialysis.
- Anemia clinically is defined for males as Hgb < 13.0 g/dL and for women as Hgb < 12.0 g/dL.
- Anemia develops probably from loss of erythropoietin synthesis in kidneys and increased presence of inhibitors of erythropoiesis. Other factors contributing to anemia include iron deficiency, blood loss, reduced half-life of circulating RBCs, and deficiencies of folate or Vitamin B12. Severity of anemia is related to duration and extent of kidney failure.
- Lower Hgb levels are associated with higher rates of hospitalizations, CV disease, cognitive impairment, and mortality.
- Hemoglobin levels generally recommended every 3 – 6 months. Treatment is strongly recommended if Hgb < 10.0 . (May be started at higher hemoglobin levels depending on reimbursement regulations)
- Medication management – epoetin (Procrit or Epogen) or darbepoetin (Aranesp). Goal is Hgb 11 – 12.
- B/P monitoring is very critical in treatment with erythropoietin because of increases in B/P.
- Fe, ferritin and transferrin saturation will also be monitored to evaluate iron deficiency. IV iron may be used for iron deficiency.

Nutritional Status

Low protein and low caloric intake are important causes of malnutrition in CKD. Anorexia caused by declining GFR contributes significantly to decreased protein and caloric intake. Pts with GFR < 60 should have a nutritional assessment of dietary protein, caloric intake and nutritional status.

- Serum albumin is one of most important markers of protein-energy malnutrition (PEM) – value even slightly less than 4.0 g/dL is important. Low serum bicarbonate levels (which drop with renal insufficiency) have been shown to be associated with protein degradation.
- 50 – 70% of dialysis pts have PEM. PEM is one of most significant markers of adverse outcomes. Risk of hospitalizations and mortality are inversely correlated to nutritional markers. The nutritional status of a patient at start of dialysis is a clinically significant risk factor for subsequent clinical outcomes (morbidity and mortality).
- Uremia predisposes patients to decreased appetite and caloric intake.
- Referral to dietician with renal background recommended for all patients with GFR < 30. Consider sooner referral for patients with decreased protein and caloric intake, low albumin, etc.

MORE FROM ASK MONEY.COM The Government of Alberta offers Alberta Blue Cross Non-Group Coverage for that all Albertans have access to a supplementary health benefits economic program that provides coverage for a variety of related services are not covered by the Alberta Health Care Insurance Plan (AHCIP). Blue Cross Blue It is the name of a conglomerate of health insurance companies with similar names operating in all 50 states, apart from Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. In order for your claim to be processed, the original receipts and other supporting documents must be attached. Payments then go directly to your dental provider, or pay your dentist for services and send the claim to our office for reimbursement, or your dentist may have arranged to submit claims electronically. It is also important to understand if you need to sign up for an individual plan. Monthly costs tend to get higher the more we raise the levels you go, but in return you usually have to pay less out of pocket for these plans. A deductible is an amount you must spend on care before the cover applies. There are three ways to organise payment: make arrangements for "assignment" billing by signing in the top right corner of the Dental Claim/Treatment form (on the right). Your provider will receive payment directly and you will pay only the portion not covered by your plan. For example, Anthem Blue Cross Blue Shield Colorado provides coverage in Colorado, and Regence BlueShield of Idaho provides coverage in Idaho. Note: Most complaints can be processed online at your provider's office, but if your claim cannot, pay for your services and use a health claim form to arrange reimbursement. Simply show your Alberta Blue Cross ID card as proof of coverage when ordering your prescription, and your pharmacist will take care of sending you the payment request. When buying health insurance, it is important to understand the basic terminology, which Blue Cross Blue Shield and other providers often use.
